Why is Integer Being Sued for Securities Fraud?

Integer has been sued for securities fraud following a significant stock drop resulting from potential violations of the federal securities laws. The decline in Integer's stock price caused significant losses to investors.

Integer designs and manufactures medical devices, specializing in cardiac rhythm management and cardiovascular products, including electrophysiology ("EP") devices that map the heart's electrical activity to diagnose and treat arrhythmias. During the relevant period, Integer repeatedly touted its EP sales growth and market position while overstating demand for its EP devices.

In truth, as alleged, demand for and revenue from Integer's EP products had fallen sharply—directly contradicting the company's public assurances.

Why did Integer's Stock Drop?

On October 23, 2025, Integer disclosed that it lowered its 2025 sales guidance to a range between $1.840 billion and $1.854 billion, from a range between $1.850 billion and $1.876 billion, and well below analysts' estimates. The company also revealed that it expected poor net sales growth of -2% to 2% and organic sales growth of 0% to 4% for 2026. Integer also admitted that two of its EP devices experienced “slower than forecasted” adoption and that it expected the slower demand “to continue into 2026.”

This news caused the price of Integer stock to drop $35.22 per share, or more than 32%, from a closing price of $109.11 per share on October 22, 2025, to $73.89 per share on October 23, 2025.
