Why is Lincoln Educational Services Being Sued for Securities Fraud?

Lincoln has been sued for securities fraud following a significant stock drop resulting from alleged violations of the federal securities laws. The decline in Lincoln's stock price caused significant losses to investors.

Lincoln provides various career-oriented postsecondary education services to high school graduates and working adults in the United States.

According to the complaint, Lincoln told investors that its investments in people and processes were "positively impacting our student retention rate." What's more, Lincoln stated that its corporate partnerships and initiatives were "designed to begin yielding meaningful contributions as we turn into 2027."

As alleged, Defendants failed to disclose that Lincoln's admissions process was not effectively converting students from enrollment to start and that Lincoln was experiencing a significant drop in student starts relative to enrollment.

Why did Lincoln Educational Services' Stock Drop?

On August 10, 2026, Lincoln reported earnings for the second quarter of 2026. Lincoln reported student starts increased only approximately 1% despite enrollment growing 9%, “as fewer enrolled students than expected attended the first day of class.” Lincoln further disclosed that “during the quarter, we observed changes in the student decision-making process that affected conversion from enrollment to start” and that Lincoln “ha[s] taken, and [will] continue to take, actions to address these trends[.]”

On this news, Lincoln stock dropped $10.22 per share, or 24.93%, from a closing price of $40.99 per share on August 7, 2026, to $30.77 per share on August 10, 2026, the following trading day.
