Why is ServiceTitan being investigated for Securities Fraud?

ServiceTitan is being investigated for securities fraud following a significant stock drop. The decline in ServiceTitan's stock price caused significant losses to investors.

ServiceTitan is an all-in-one operating system for trades businesses, such as HVAC, plumbing, roofing, landscaping, and other skilled trades. Max is ServiceTitan's AI-powered platform designed to automate business workflows for contractors and other trades businesses.

Why did ServiceTitan's Stock Drop?

On September 8, 2026, ServiceTitan reported slowing growth in its key metric, Gross Transaction Volume, and provided operating income guidance of $29 – $30 million, representing a 33.6% sequential decline. ServiceTitan revealed that it "elected to tighten our focus on existing commercial trades . . . rather than the planned expansion of our offering to new trades" to "enable increased investments in and attention on Max."

Following that announcement, ServiceTitan shares fell approximately 30% on September 9, 2026.
