Stephanie Bartone is an associate at BFA and a member of the Global Recovery Services Group where she advises leading institutional investors on securities and investment-related claims pursued worldwide. She provides comprehensive consulting and liaison services to assist clients in evaluating and maximizing their global recovery opportunities.

Stephanie has nearly a decade of experience representing clients in large-scale securities and consumer related class action lawsuits in both federal and state courts. She draws on her substantial securities litigation experience to help institutional clients navigate complex global recovery landscapes.

Prior to joining BFA, Stephanie was an associate at a nationally recognized securities litigation firm where she litigated complex class actions including securities fraud, consumer fraud, and mergers & acquisitions. Her efforts have assisted in the recovery of over $125 million for investors. Stephanie was previously an attorney for the Connecticut Department of Consumer Protection, where she oversaw the regulation and implementation of newly enacted legislation authorizing online casino gaming, online sports betting, and online fantasy contests in Connecticut.
